Song Story

This song was a long time in development stages. Two years, off and on (mostly off :) The first verse and initial melody were written in a church garden while I awaited band practice one evening, and noticed a very plump robin hopping.... stopping.... cocking its head.... waiting.... and more waiting -- until suddenly it dashed its beak under the dirt and grabbed a worm. Instead of flying off somewhere with its newest food blessing, the robin hopped over to a nearby bush and gave the worm to an adult female cardinal. I'd seen adult birds feed their babies, but this was new knowledge for me.

The second verse came along 130 pages later in that journal. Back in 2010, I didn't really expect God to be honoring me with enough songs for more than the three or four albums I'd already set up (in amazement even at those honorings). So the delay in Parts 2 and 3 has been a blessing:

The song now fits into the later Amazing Psalms 'n' Promises album, providing a musical setting for God's FULL Word of Psalm 46 -- not just a joyful paraphrase of this psalm like "Hope Through Dark Rain" provides in a different prayer form.

It's been my joy to see God answering my prayers that He'll use me to provide new musical settings for His written Word in the psalms and the prophetic writings especially. I deeply thank Him for this beautiful new parable idea that describes and fits with His Psalm 46 Word.
